

Employer Workshop Supporting LPNs* with Practice Problems

The skillful handling of situations in which an LPN has ongoing practice problems is one of the greatest challenges facing managers.

Questions and concerns about a LPN's practice as it relates to knowledge, judgment, ethics and communication often creates stress between colleagues. The resulting tension, left unchecked will negatively affect morale, productivity and relationships in the workplace. More importantly, these problems may affect the care clients receive.

This workshop will help managers identify strategies which can be used to set practice contexts and identify practice issues.

Participants will be guided through a framework of action to help them best describe practice problems, clarify expectations, create a supportive environment and develop action based learning plans.
